QUARTER MILLION PA. RESIDENTS CAN NOT READ OR WRITE

19 DISTRICTS, 1 TEACHER

Dr. Rule Pleads for More Effective Educational Leadership

(This is the second and concluding article of a series based on exclusive interviews with Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.)

By Joseph A. Loftis
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Dec. 22.—Pennsylvania demands drastic improvements in its public school system if it is to maintain its position in the vanguard of the nation's cultural and industrial progress.

More than a quarter million Pennsylvania residents, over 10 years of age, can neither read nor write. Fourteen school districts of the Commonwealth have no schools at all. Nineteen more districts have only one teacher.

Four hundred additional districts have three or fewer teachers.

Dr. James N. Rule, superintendent of public instruction, revealed these statistics today in voicing a plea for "a larger (school district) unit to provide more economical management and more effective educational leadership."

The not distant future, Dr. Rule predicted, will bring more rigid and exacting requirements for teachers, higher standards for entrance to teacher training schools and radical changes in the methods of teaching foreign languages.

At the present time, he said, there are between three and four thousand certificated teachers in Pennsylvania, mostly in the high school field, who are jobless.

"The depression?" he was asked. "Only partially," he answered. "Naturally the annual turnover is not as great today. But the excess existed before the business recession."

"We will have to require a higher type for admission to teacher training, both as to personality and preparation, in the future. Personality and character are every bit as important as preparation."

"The time is ripe for another advance in requirements—a four-year course instead of two for elementary teaching, and a five-year course for high school. That will come about in the next few years."

Although Dr. Rule indicated he is far from pleased with the methods of teaching foreign languages, he emphasized that importation of foreign teachers is not necessarily a solution to the problem.

MISSING CAR DRIVER REPORTED IN TRENTON

August Ahler's Friends Claim To Know Where He Is

SUSTAINED INJURIES DEFINITION IS CHANGED

By Gene Myers
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Dec. 22.—(INS)—January 1, 1932, will signalize a radical departure in the ordinary life of Mr. John Motorist.

For instance, Mr. Motorist won't be able to wait in front of the Department Store with the motor of his automobile purring idly while Ma Smith is inside getting a new suit for Johnnie Junior.

Nor will he be able to pull up his car on the highway to more effectively view a particularly enticing bit of scenery. Those halcyon days will be just a memory on New Year's Day.

And all because the last regular session of the general assembly did a bit of etymological work in coining a new definition for "parking." Briefly, the assembly decided that if you stop your car, occupied or otherwise, along a street or highway after the first of the year, the car automatically is parked.

Heretofore, many motorists parked their cars with a comfortable feeling of immunity if they happened to have a wife, sweetheart or friend along, capable of driving the car from its parked position. The view that such halting of the car could not be construed as parking was upheld by many legal authorities. In fact, it was the basic premise of many a court argument.

The Legislature, however, ended the dispute in short order, by amending the definition of parking. As amended, parking is:

"The standing of a vehicle except police or fire department vehicle or ambulance, whether occupied or not, upon a highway, otherwise and temporarily for the purpose and while actually engaged in loading or unloading or in obedience to traffic regulations or traffic signs or signals."

Official headlight and brake adjusting stations will be abolished after the (Continued on Page 4)

A special sermon was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Annick whose theme was: "Following the Gleam," followed by singing of the Christmas carol, "It Came Upon A Midnight Clear."

A substantial offering was received at this time for the poor and needy.

Suspect Will Be Brought Back Here to Answer Charge—New York Was Thoroughly Combed But No Trace Could Be Found Following the Crime and It Was Thought He Had Sailed for Italy — Photograph Was Left With Police at That Time.

A reputed New York gunman, wanted here in connection with the murder of Giovanni (John) Tilotta, December 28th, 1928, is under arrest in New York, and Bucks County Detective Antonio Russo left today to bring him back here to stand trial.

The man under arrest is Ciro Meli, who was taken into custody by the New York authorities. After Meli's arrest in that metropolis, the police of that city identified him by his photograph which had been placed on file by the Bucks county authorities following the Tilotta murder. New York police communicated with Chief of Police Jones, and Detective Russo, advising them of the arrest of the man wanted here.

"Where do you live?" asked Judge Guy.

"In the world," came the answer from the lips of the prisoner.

"The sky is my roof," he said. "Ten dollars fine and costs or 30 days in jail," said the judge.

"Have you the money?"

IF SUN SHOULD BLOW UP

Professor Elvey of Northwestern University is looking into the chance of our sun blowing up. For stars have a way of doing just that, he declares; one big one, Nova Pictoris, exploded in 1925, and when the trouble was over the mass of gas filled 40,000 times as much space as Nova Pictoris had occupied.

The professor doesn't say the sun is going to explode, but he does insist that so far as anybody can tell, it's just as liable to do so as any other star. If it does, he says, we'll know it in just about eight minutes, time for light to travel to us; and in 138 hours a gas wave will get here, and we'll all be asphyxiated, or something more sudden.

Somewhat there is a certain comfort in such precise data. Maybe the professor knows just how long it would take for the gas to reach these mundane trenches, but one suspects a little spoofing. Besides, is it sure we would be here by that time? The gravitational influence that keeps us in the present orbit would seem likely to be disturbed, and maybe this cloud we inhabit would have hurried away to less agitated areas before the gas got here.

At any rate one phase deserves contemplation. If this corner of space ever pulls off such a bit of pyrotechnics, it will really be a mighty small show compared to the cosmic scheme. Our sun is one of the small stars; the earth would be invisible to people like ourselves, living on any of the other great luminaries. To folks living on Betelgeuse, the blow-up of our sun would afford about as impressive a spectacle as a man in Chicago lighting a gas jet would furnish to the people of Bristol.

Perhaps a little more ruminating about some of these comparative aspects would give us all a more accurate apprehension of our significance in the scheme of creation. Even a trans-Atlantic flight of a movieland divorce case would be interest during those 138 hours of waiting; but think with what eagerness everybody would turn to the page of household hints and read up on the best ways to furnish homes made gas masks to the family!

IS IT 15 YEARS AHEAD?

The manager of a large midwestern airport the other day declared that, contrary to popular opinion, commercial aviation in the United States is "at least fifteen years ahead of commercial aviation in Europe."

This, he said, applies both to equipment and service. Night flying on passenger lines, he said, is still confined to North America; and he added that most of the patrons of the European lines are American tourists!

All of this is rather surprising, in view of all that we have heard about Europe's "supremacy" in the air. Overseas, apparently, military aviation is still the branch that gets most of the attention. Aviation in the United States has definitely established itself commercially, and has already made an amazing good record for service.

Judging by the parkers, no youth gets very far who burns the midnight oil in an automobile.

SYNOPSIS

Leaving Hawaii shortly after her father's death, young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith goes to San Francisco, where she meets and loves a handsome man named Tony. Fanchon is shocked to learn that Tony is a racketeer, implicated in a recent murder. She, too, is now wanted. Fanchon escapes in an airplane under the name of "Smith." Evelyn Howard, whom she had met on the boat coming from Hawaii, is aboard. Evelyn is enroute to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she has never met. After Fanchon confides in Evelyn, the latter treats her coolly. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. She decides to escape Tony and the past and start life anew by masquerading as Evelyn. She requests a doctor to wire Mrs. Carstairs that "Evelyn" is safe. A wire comes from Mrs. Carstairs saying that Collin cannot meet Fanchon. Fanchon learns Collin is Mrs. Carstairs' only son. Mrs. Carstairs meets Fanchon at train explaining, "But you're not Evelyn, are you? You can't be." The girl's terror of being discovered passes when Mrs. Carstairs explains she couldn't believe anyone so beautiful could belong in the family. Her kindness and affection prick Fanchon's conscience.

CHAPTER XI

Mrs. Carstairs left the room after a word to the maid. The little suitcase had been brought up and was on the canvas luggage stand. The maid moved toward it.

"Don't unpack it," Fanchon told her, "there is nothing of my own in there. It must be returned."

"Very good, Miss Evelyn. May I run your bath?"

"Please," said Fanchon.

There had been plenty of servants on the plantation. Fanchon was perfectly accustomed to service, although she had lacked it for eight months or more now. But it was easy to slip back into the old ways.

Presently she was lying full length in the great marble tub, her longed arm a little awkwardly out of the water. There was a warm scent of fragrant bath salts. The bathroom itself was quite beautiful, tiled in green and black and white. Fanchon closed her eyes and dreamed. But it was all a dream.

Later rested and refreshed she was in the big swan bed, with pillows piled in back of her, looking about the pretty room. Emma appeared with a table that swung out over the bed and a tray. On the tray was supper—mashed fare, a quaint little pottery bowl of soup, a white breast of a chicken, a baked potato and a vegetable, a salad, a cup of custard and coffee. Fanchon, who had been hungrier than she thought, looked at it with delight, and at the silver, the pretty china, the bread and butter sandwiches cut water thin.

Mrs. Carstairs came in, in a dark tailored satin lounging robe. Her hair, free of her hat, was lovely, masses of it, pure silver, waved close to her fine head. Emma pulled a big chair close to the bed, arranged a tip-top table beside it and Jameson brought in the second tray.

"Your mother and I used to do this, now and again," Mrs. Carstairs commented, and sighed heavily.

"When everything had been cleared away—Mrs. Carstairs talking of Southampton, of plans in the meantime, lightly and with calculated casualness, the doctor was announced. He came on his way to the theatre, in evening clothes. A tall, good-looking man, Wynne, by name. With Mrs. Carstairs watching, he went all over Fanchon, looked at her arm, rebanded it and pronounced her sound in limb, if bruised and wrenched. Only rest would cure that and nature, he said, added that she had had a severe nervous shock. He left her a nerve tonic and some sleeping powders.

"But I won't need them!" Fanchon protested.

"They will relax you," he told her, smiling, "you are terribly keyed up."

Mrs. Carstairs went out to the hall with him, as he left.

"Don't unpack it," Fanchon told her. "There's nothing of my own in there."

"She's all right," he told her in answer to her anxious question. "I didn't of course ask for details. She's pretty badly shocked by the whole dreadful business. And very nervous. Give her lots of sunlight, rest, fresh air and keep off any subject that seems to affect her disagreeably or emotionally. See that she gets plenty of recreation too, and laughter. She'll need that to help her forget."

After a moment he asked, "And Collin?"

Mrs. Carstairs made a gesture of despair. "Terribly stubborn," she admitted. "Does she know?"

"Only what I wrote her. Which wasn't much. There are some things that you cannot possibly write," Mrs. Carstairs admitted.

She added, as the doctor stood there silent, frowning a little, "I told her I would talk to her about it tonight."

"Not tonight," the physician advised, quickly, "wait until she is more rested. She is struggling for self control. I could see that. But she is really tremendously upset."

He left and Mrs. Carstairs returned to Fanchon.

"I must," said Fanchon, "send back the suitcase to the Lawsons. They are the people who took me in after—the accident. I borrowed the case from them and a hat and coat as well. I could have bought things in the town but there wasn't time and I couldn't get out to get them, she explained."

"Emma will attend to it for you," Mrs. Carstairs suggested, "you are not to worry. And you can send them a check for their kindness to you."

"A check?" asked Fanchon, astonished.

Mrs. Carstairs rose and went over to a rosewood desk. From the drawer she took a new bank book and gave it to Fanchon. Fanchon opened it. It assured her that in a certain New York bank a certain sum had been deposited to the order of Evelyn Howard.

"We can arrange for your signature later," Mrs. Carstairs told her. "It is your allowance."

Fanchon stared at the check book. Money! Under false pretenses! But she had money of her own. No, it was not hers. It was Tony's. She could not spend more of it, she must one day manage somehow to return it to him. Yet how could she, without revealing the web of deceit which she had set herself to weave? Yet this money which was offered her was not her own, either.

Nothing could make it so. "It is your allowance," said Mrs. Carstairs again, "and will be paid quarterly."

The deposit was twenty-five hundred dollars.

Fanchon flushed and paled again. "But I can't—it is too much. . . I—" she stammered.

"Ten thousand dollars a year! Mrs. Carstairs said gently, "You will need pocket money. And clothes. I am going to give myself the great pleasure of outfitting you, first, from head to feet. And after that, you may use your allowance as you see fit."

She added, "I have more money than I can possibly spend. Collin has his own income. His father's fortune was divided between us and has more than doubled. Collin has a seat on the Stock Exchange as well and is doing famously. I have always felt that . . . that I owed you something. You see, while the estate left by your grandparents was not large, it all came to me. Half of it should have been your mother's. I shall never forgive myself," she said low, "and may never forgive me."

Fanchon said, low, desperately anxious to help by some word of comfort: "I am sure she did."

Mrs. Carstairs eyes lighted. "Do you believe that? You don't know how happy you have made me! But I will not let you talk any more."

Nomination of officers occurred at the December meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary, William Penn Fire Company, in the fire station last evening. Mrs. George Spill, Trenton avenue, occupied the chair. Santa Claus was present, and a Christmas party enjoyed after the business was transacted. Gifts were exchanged, and refreshments served.

Peppy Pals sewing class members will conduct their Christmas party this evening, hostess being Miss Elma E. Haefner.

"Jiggs" Ash-Trays Are Gifts of School Pupils

A triple presentation occurred at Jefferson avenue public school yesterday.

The gifts were ash receptacles in the form of "Jiggs," of the well-known McManis cartoon. Donors were students of the seventh grade, taught by Miss M. R. Fraatz; and recipients: Howard E. James, superintendent of public schools; William Rosser, principal of Jefferson avenue school; and Leonard Gilkeson, caretaker of the school.

Many interesting, instructive and enjoyable hours were put on the three "Jiggs" by the boys taught by Miss Fraatz.

Old pieces of wood, sufficient to cut a wooden "man," 31 by 10 inches, were used by the lads in this work. The figures were carefully cut, and then the costumes and features outlined on either side of the inch-thick wood.

On one side "Jiggs" appears in his Sunday suit, and on the reverse he is shown in his work-a-day garb. A cigar is in his mouth; and in his extended hand he holds the ash receptacle.

The figures are mounted on blocks cut in such a manner that the cartoon man stands firmly erect.

That the students have had fine practice with saw, pencil and paint, is shown by the finished products.

Messrs. James, Rosser and Gilkeson were much pleased with their gifts.

The boys and girls likewise made door-stops and book-ends in the form of Dutch boys and Dutch girls. These have been presented to their parents as Christmas gifts.

Other holiday work of the girls of Miss Fraatz's class include black oil-cloth book covers, which are artistically sewed with color wool yarn. Designs in contrasting colors appear on the front of the covers.

Abington, Dec. 22.—Thomas Wendler, 50 year old former principal of the Willow Grove High School, died early today of injuries received when struck by the automobile of Leonard Lettinger, of Jenkintown, Monday, at the intersection of York Road and Township Line at Abington. He lived at 313 Olney avenue, Philadelphia. Wendler was not believed seriously hurt at the time, but suffered a relapse last night and died. Lettinger was held in jail to await the coroner's inquest.

PLENTY OF DIRTY LINEN ON FOOTBALL LINE

By Frank G. Menke
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Plenty of dirty linen on the football clothes-line, and most faculties snobbish about tackling the "laundery" job.

So many football coaches out of jobs now that tabulation of what class of workmen predominate among the unemployed finds the tutors high up in the list.

Funny the way most of them lose their jobs.

Bill Roper, coach at Princeton in 1930, "busted" into print with comments about how sour was the handling of the Tigers against Yale. And the next thing was Al Wittmer's resignation.

The college paper at New York University took a blast at "Chick" Meehan and "Chick" answered with his tweet-tweet of farewell. After which N. Y. U. announces "reformation" in the future.

Harvard promises "sweeping changes" for 1932.

And then issues its statement, for the year ending last June, showing athletics receipts of $1,071,498 and includes among its outlay "administrative and other expenses $130,795.05."

A hundred and thirty thousand berries to operate a sports program.

"Sweeping changes for 1932?" What can it mean.

A Yale publication describes jerking out goal posts after victory as a form of vandalism. Well, they didn't do much of this vandalizing at Princeton this season. Nor while Roper was there either.

"Inner Circle of Seven Dixie Colleges to fight Conference Recruiting"—headline. What's the matter? Are those seven overcrowded now with good footballers?

State Legislature in Wisconsin investigating athletic affairs at University of Wisconsin. Now why is that? Pacific Coast conference bars newspapers from football field hereafter? Have the cameras been unconscious detectives of some kind.

No matter how seriously you ponder the problem you perhaps still will find that the difference between an amateur and a pro is that the amateur won't take cash.

first of the new year. This amendment to the motor code was passed by the regular session of the Legislature. Permanent official inspection stations will take on the work formerly done by the official headlight stations, as well as work incident to the compulsory inspection campaigns.

The permanent official inspection stations will be the only stations to issue official stickers or certificates for headlight, brake or other inspections and adjustments.

The definition of a commercial motor vehicle was also amended by the Legislature. This also becomes effective the first of the year. The motor code incident to that particular motor vehicle was amended to include motor vehicles of the bus type operated under contract with or owned by any school district in Pennsylvania for the transportation of school children.

During the present year, motor vehicles of the bus type were registered according to their seating capacity.

The change in classification of the commercial motor vehicle will bring about a decrease in registration fees.

However, if the bus type vehicles are not operated exclusively for the transportation of school children, it will be necessary for the owners of such vehicles to take out motor omnibus registration instead of commercial vehicle registration.
